

Edward and Barbara Greb Award for Education Abroad JayTerm Award Application Instructions

SCHOLARSHIP BACKGROUND AND INFORMATION

In the late 1960s, Dr. Greb was a young recently unemployed Korean Conflict veteran, married with a young child and an undergraduate at Duquesne University. He decided to leave classes at the University to find employment. The University required an "exit interview" and he scheduled a meeting with Dr. Helena Miller, a Professor of Biology and an Associate Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Others had been scheduled for interviews that same afternoon and the long wait in the hall outside Dr. Miller's office did nothing to raise his spirits. Eventually, it was his turn and Dr. Miller called his name. He entered "Sit down," she said with a tone that he remembered from her classes in biology that meant, "I'll tell you when to speak." She shuffled some papers and finally handed him a completed registration form for the next semester. He said, "There must be a mistake. I'm not coming back." "Nonsense," Dr. Miller said. "Your grades aren't spectacular, but they are acceptable."

He repeated that he would not be returning to Duquesne University. She stared at him for a few seconds and becoming somewhat angry said, "I'm very busy. I'm behind schedule. There are others waiting in the hall. Why aren't you returning?" A simple and honest reply from him, "I don't have the money." Again, a stare and a question, "Money is stopping you from continuing as a student?" And again he replied, "I don't have the money."

Dr. Miller opened a drawer in her desk, removed a handbag and placed her checkbook on the desk. She wrote a check, stapled it to the form, and handed the form to Dr. Greb. The amount of the check was the tuition required for the next semester and it was addressed to the Duquesne University Business Office. He sat for a few moments looking at the check. She broke the silence with, "I'm behind schedule. You know where the business office is located...?" "How do I repay you?" He said. "Get the hell out of here," she replied, "I'm busy!"

He remained at Duquesne University, eventually receiving both BA in Psychology and an MA in Sociology, but before those events he talked often with Dr. Miller. Her kindness was based on a promise she had made years before to a similar benefactor, which she had honored often. It seems as an undergraduate, she too was unable to pay her tuition. Faced with the prospect of leaving the university, a person provided her tuition with two conditions: no repayment was necessary but would be appreciated at some point in time, and that she would extend the kindness to others in need as her ability to assist improved. Dr. Greb made the same promise to Dr. Miller and has honored his commitment many times since then.
