

TESTIMONIALS FROM WASHINGTON & JEFFERSON STUDENTS FALL 2018

“My time at Webster Athens was unique to say the least. The first month was scary, but Dina made me feel comfortable and confident in Athens. The course work was light, which allowed me to use this confidence and travel around Europe on my free weekends. Here at Webster, even a girl who had never left PA can work with refugees, sea turtles, travel to 7 countries and find a home in a culture that many people can only experience in a text book. Even as a STEM student, I see such a value in personal growth for studying things you normally wouldn’t in a new country.” Katelyn Prevenslik, Junior Chemistry student, Washington & Jefferson

College (Photo of Katie is in Santorini.)

“My time here in Athens has been a rollercoaster, to say the least. Emotions sometimes play tricks on us hiding the true importance of what we have learned. Luckily the structure of the Webster Program in Athens supplemented me with just what I needed to see beyond, and be able to understand the emotions felt while being in a new country surrounded by a culture that is not your own. Through classes that help you understand why things happen here, to community service that allows you to get involved with people and things you never thought of. From helping teach asylum seekers basic

English skills to dancing the tango with locals; I truly started to know and understand the place that I now call my second home. ‘Take advantage of whatever life throws at you.’” William Tucker, Junior Sociology student from Washington & Jefferson College

(Photo of William is in the mountain village of Arahova, outside of Delphi, during an Odyssey in Athens excursion.)