

Time Off to Vote

The polls are generally open for local, state or national elections a sufficient number of hours for employees to be able to vote before or after working hours. However, if employees cannot exercise their right to vote except during normal working hours, they should arrange with their supervisor for sufficient time off to vote. The time off may be designated by the supervisor and may not exceed two hours. This time is given without penalty or without loss of wages.